Candidates duke it out for Weiner seat

The race for disgraced Rep. Anthony Weiner's seat was undecided as of press time last night.

Democrat Assemblyman David Weprin was fighting for the seat against Republican Bob Turner.

The race was tight in recent days, with Turner leading Weprin by six points Monday.

But the results may not even really matter: The district might not be around much longer — it is in danger of being cut when New York loses two House seats.

the borough. The former congressman was spotted Tuesday moving out of his two-bedroom in Forrest Hills. The New York Post reported that he is upgrading to a three-bedroom apartment on a pricey West Village street.

When is it wrong to defend rights?

- ▶ Levi Aron's defense attorney uses Facebook to defend her client's rights
- ▶ Debate between young and older lawyers when it comes to social media

Jennifer McCann must defend accused child-killer Levi Aron in court, but she's also defending her client's rights on Facebook — an unpopular move among some criminal defense attorneys.

McCann, 30, opened her practice in March and created a Facebook page after taking on the case following Aron's July arrest. She said she created the page to correct public misconceptions about her case, but it has also opened the door for death threats, angry out-cries and bad press that she said even hurt her business.

"I'm not defending a crime, I'm defending constitutional rights," she argued. "I don't see a difference between social media and traditional media."

Her actions have garnered criticism from other prominent criminal defense attorneys.

Joseph Tacopina — who has defended Joran van der Sloot, Michael Jackson's associates and, most recently, former cop Kenneth Moreno, acquitted of rape — said McCann's decision to be on Facebook was the result of "inexperience."

"I'm not on any social media network," he said. "You should be focusing on the task at hand, not some dude in his dad's basement in Des Moines, Iowa."

Backlash, he said, comes with the job.

Nicole Black, an attorney and technology writer, warned that social media can be a blessing and a curse. "There is a wrong way to use it," Black said. "I think she's walking a fine line."

Lawyer making herself a pariah?

NEW YORK. Scott Greenfield, a criminal defense attorney with 30 years of experience, said McCann's actions could threaten her career.

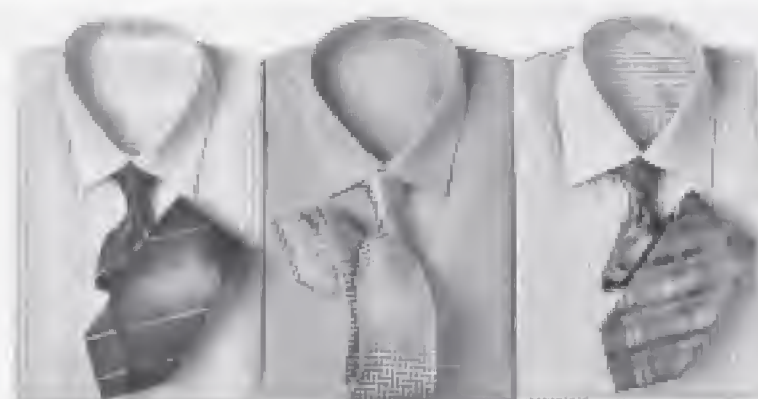

"This is the kind of thing that can make a young lawyer crash and burn," he said, warning that her behavior could make her a "pariah" in the legal community.

Greenfield said the actions might get her headlines, but that McCann seems to be focused on her own career, not the fate of her client. ● METRO/EAE

Sept. 11 memorial mistake: Victim's name misspelled

► Family finds two letters switched when they visit the memorial pools ► Memorial promises quick fix ► Jeffrey Schreier worked for Cantor Fitzgerald.

Janice Hart arrived at the Sept. 11 memorial Sunday to touch the name of her brother — only to find it misspelled.

Walking through the two memorial pools and finally finding her brother's name, etched in bronze, she saw him memorialized as "Jeffery," not Jeffrey, Schreier.

"I couldn't believe it," she told NBC. "This is the only place we could go to have some solace, and to see his name engraved incorrectly was very distressing to us."

What's it going to take to fix?

To fix the name, workers will need to re-etch the letters into the half-inch-thick bronze panels that line the pools.

Each bronze panel took five hours to put in place, according to the museum, and it takes 45 seconds to water-jet cut each letter.

The memorial promised to fix the name this week.

"We are extremely sorry for the pain this mistake has caused Jeffrey's family," said memorial spokesman Michael Frazier. "As soon as we found out about this error we began working on how to make it right."

Schreier worked in the mail room at Cantor Fitzgerald, which lost more people — 658 — than any other company.

City pushes big campus for sciences

New York City will be the future home of a state-of-the-art engineering and applied sciences campus, if Mayor Michael Bloomberg gets his way.

In July, Bloomberg announced that the city issued a request for proposals to build the institution. Schools have until Oct. 28 to submit proposals.

Recent studies show that degrees in those fields lead to the highest paying jobs right out of school. That's because, experts say, applied sciences are part of virtually everything in daily life — picking up our cell phones, sending a text, or searching for directions using an app.

Finding a home

Proposed locations for the applied sciences campus:

- ▶ The Navy Hospital Campus at the Brooklyn Navy Yard
- ▶ The Goldwater Hospital campus on Roosevelt Island
- ▶ Governors Island

"[Applied science] products that are produced impact everyone, from apps, new services in your hospital to new devices in your home," said Lance Collins, dean of engineering at Cornell University.

Dual-use livery cars won't work

A bill backed by Mayor Michael Bloomberg to allow a number of livery cars to pick up street hails in the outer boroughs was passed by state lawmakers, and now it only needs Gov. Andrew Cuomo's signature to become law. Advocates of the bill say it will make it much easier for people in Brooklyn and Queens to get around. Below, an advocate for taxi medallion owners and one for livery car owners — two usually opposing teams — explain why they say the bill is a bad idea.

Opinion

and DARLYN SANCHEZ
LETTERS@METRO.Us

"Conservative estimates point to the fact that at least 25 percent of car service clients are left stranded by no-show cars."

If it failed in Manhattan, why try the outer boroughs?

In his State of the City address, Mayor Michael Bloomberg announced that he would seek to bring street-hail service to outer-borough residents. While we support the mayor's goal, the resulting bill soon to be before Gov. Andrew Cuomo is flawed and should be vetoed.

Currently, livery cars illegally provide street-hail services. So, while there is a clear need for a solution, Mayor Bloomberg's misguided plan, mandating "dual-use" cars, will result in unreliable service.

Why? Because dual-use vehicles, with drivers able to both legally street hail and receive calls for pickups, have historically resulted in poor — and sometimes discriminatory — use for both street-hail and car-service customers.

When dual-use was implemented in Manhattan in the '70s, it provided cover for drivers to refuse to pick up passengers based on race, age or disability, using the excuse of having "just" received a pick-up call. On the flip side, drivers often picked up a street-hailer for the immediate fare, leaving the car-service customer stranded.

As a result, dual-use was discontinued in the '80s. Dual-use doesn't work in cities like San Francisco either, where conservative estimates point to the fact that at least 25 percent of car service clients are left stranded by no-show cars.

Adding insult to injury, the legislation completely disregards wheelchair-users by not requiring any cars to be wheelchair-accessible.

But it doesn't have to be this way. We should create two single-use transportation systems, similar to those which function so well in Manhattan. Two systems — one for street hails and one for arranged pickups — would best ensure reliable and fair service for all consumers. Therefore, we urge the governor to veto the current bill.

— Darlyn Sanchez is president of the United As One TLC Base Owners Association.

Our Aim is to Beat Most Offers!

We Strive to Beat All Legitimate Written Offers

Before Bringing your items to us, take them to other dealers. Have them give you legitimate offers in writing. Then bring your jewelry and written offers to one of our locations. Although no one can guarantee with certainty they are paying the highest price for an article at any particular time, we will strive to beat most legitimate written offers.

Why We Can Usually Pay More Than Other Dealers

Most jewelers and dealers specialize in few items and focus on newer looking items to resell. Because they are unfamiliar with many other items including vintage jewelry, old watches, coins, flatware, etc. they tend to offer very low prices because these items are not readily salable for them. Our company has many specialized buyers for the various classifications of items that we purchase, therefore we can usually pay more.

A Note Regarding the Up To Prices listed in this Ad

The condition and rarity of an item determines its price. If an item is in excellent condition and very rare it might be worth the up to price, or even more. However, if an item is in poor condition, the value will be lower. For example, a 1927 S Quarter could be worth $7,000 in new condition or less than $20 in poor condition. The up to price reflects items of exceptional quality and rarity. Although it is unlikely you will have these items due to their extreme rarity, feel free to bring whatever items you may have and we will evaluate them free of charge.

Customer Satisfaction

Most of our business comes from satisfied customers and referrals which includes their friends and families. Our showrooms are safe and private. Our staff is courteous and professional and we strive as a company to make your selling experience a pleasant one.

US Embassy attacked in Afghanistan

Taliban fighters fired rockets at the U.S. Embassy and NATO headquarters in Kabul yesterday and attacked police in three other areas in the biggest assault the insurgent group has mounted on the Afghan capital.

At least nine people were killed and 23 wounded in the four attacks, and a gun-battle around a half-built high-rise building raged on into the evening as NATO and Afghan attack helicopters circled overhead.

The fighters had chosen a strategic and heavily fortified main target for the well-coordinated attacks.

Their ability to shower artillery around the diplomatic district was a clear show of strength at a time when NATO-led forces are claiming significant security gains and preparing for their exit by 2014.

Although the Taliban have attacked multiple targets in Kabul in the past, this is the first time they have organized simultaneous assaults on such separate areas.

"The scale of today's attack is unprecedented," said Andrew Exum, fellow at the Center for a New American Security. "There was almost certainly either a breakdown in security among the Afghans with responsibility for Kabul or an intelligence failure."

Hundreds of students from two schools were stuck near the site of the attack, and terrified parents rushing to rescue their children were stopped by security forces. REUTERS

Man who said he was abducted by aliens dies

"They weren't lying. Whatever it was, it was real to them."

CHIEF INVESTIGATOR FOR JACKSON COUNTY SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT

Charles Hickson, the Mississippi man who claimed he was abducted and probed by aliens while he was fishing with a friend in 1973 and never backed off the story despite the ridicule he endured, has died.

Hickson, 80, died last Friday of a heart attack, his family said yesterday.

Hickson, then 42, was fishing with 19-year-old Calvin Parker Jr. on a pier near Pascagoula, Miss., in October 1973 when they said a cigar-shaped UFO with flashing blue lights suddenly appeared above them.

Although Hickson was reluctant to share the story, he and Parker eventually went to local police and reported the incident. REUTERS

Senate panel backs Pentagon budget freeze

WASHINGTON. A Senate panel yesterday approved defense spending of about $630 billion for the 2012 fiscal year, freezing the Pentagon's base budget at $513 billion for a second straight year while seeking nearly $118 billion for U.S. wars abroad.

The $513 billion Pentagon base budget would be $26 billion less than requested by President Barack Obama and nearly $20 billion less than approved by the House of Representatives. REUTERS

► Washington politicians negotiate how to tweak retirement to make 401(k) plans more efficient, keep Social Security afloat and save some money for the federal treasury.

Hoping to retire? Politicians at work debating fine print

U.S. retirement programs could look different if a grand deficit-cutting bargain is struck in upcoming negotiations.

Tomorrow, the powerful Senate Finance Committee will explore "Tax Reform Options: Promoting Retirement Security." Among the ideas being floated are a replacement of the 401(k) deduction, changes in the withdrawal choices that workers face when they retire and a shift in the way Social Security benefits are calculated. That is on top of the increase in the retirement age that has been mentioned several times in recent months.

The so-called "retirement deficit" — the difference between what Americans have saved for retirement and what they should have saved — has been put at $6.6 trillion by Boston College's Center for Retirement Research.

A variety of pressures and trends have come together to put these new ideas on the table. Prominent members of both political parties have talked up the idea of loophole-closing, rate-lowering tax reform.

Put all of it together, and it points to changes in the sprawling retirement system. "The kinds of points at which you can get fundamental changes adopted is in the midst of a big deal," says Dallas Salisbury, who has been watching retirement policy closely as head of the Employee Benefit Research Institute. "And President Obama wants a grand bargain." REUTERS

Debt crisis roils Europe

BERLIN. International alarm over Europe's debt crisis reached new heights yesterday, with President Obama pressing the bloc's big countries to show leadership as talk of a Greek default escalated and markets heaped pressure on Italy. German Chancellor Angela Merkel sought to quash talk of an imminent Greek default or exit from the euro zone, but confusion sent markets gyrating. REUTERS

Greenspan: Tax reform

WASHINGTON. Former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan called for tax reform to be part of an urgent effort to put the U.S. economy back on track.

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Megan Fox: 'I lost too much weight'

Megan Fox tells Amica magazine that she has dropped too many pounds, so she's ditching her vegan diet. "For a year and a half, until about four months ago, I followed a strict vegan diet based on raw fruits and vegetables, no bread, sugar and coffee," she says. "But I had lost too much weight."

Say what you will about Fox, but that has got to be the first time any starlet has ever admitted to being too skinny.

Speaking of numbers, the actress also says she is totally up for being a mom, but first she needs to pad out her bank account. "I want to have children, I've always wanted kids," she says. "I have a number in my mind of what amount of money I want in the bank so that I can protect my child's future."

Hmmm. I wonder if that number has less to do with how much she has saved and is more about "what I, Megan Fox, will command from a major motion picture before I sabotage a career based on looks by having a child."

Movie. Premiere

This is how she does it

You know what's a great way for Sarah Jessica Parker to hide the fact that she has a large nose? Make sure she stands next to Christina Hendricks' cleavage. Here are the two actresses at the premiere of their new movie, "I Don't Know How She Does It," on Monday in New York City.

Eva Longoria speaks the truth

Eva Longoria admits it's a little too soon after her split from Tony Parker to think about settling down again. "I'm not opposed to it, I just don't really give it a lot of thought," Longoria tells Access Hollywood. "Ask a woman after divorce if she's going to get married, you won't get an honest answer."

Talking points

Aguilera stays on

Producers behind reality singing competition "The Voice" have no plans to ditch judge Christina Aguilera, despite rumors that the singer isn't going to be part of the show's second season. "There is absolutely no truth to the rumor," NBC's Paul Telegdy says in an official statement. Aguilera is still under contract for Season 2, which premieres in February.

Madonna pokes fun at herself

Madonna is making the most out of her "I hate hydrangeas" gaffe from the Venice International Film Festival. The singer has released a video on YouTube showing her, in silent film style, apologizing to a bouquet. "You have no idea how many nights I have lost thinking how I hurt you. Words cannot express how sorry I am," the subtitles read, until the tone changes and she lashes out at the flowers. "I still hate hydrangeas! And I will always hate them! It's a free country! So f— you, I like roses," the video says as Madonna screams and stomps on the hydrangeas.

Harry rakes in the dough

If the whole royal family or military thing doesn't work out, Prince Harry could have a career in finance. The 26-year-old royal set a record for closing the largest foreign exchange deal while manning the phones during a charity event, completing a $24.5 billion swap between Barclays London and a European counterpart, according to the London Metro. Harry earned $9,000 commission for the effort, which he plans to donate to charity.

Why are there so many insurance advertisements?

- On top of the glut of insurance companies in America, each of them has at least two separate ad campaigns
- From geckos to mayhem, what's with the overkill?

There's the "Mayhem" guy for Allstate, the Geico Gecko, Flo — the overly enthusiastic Progressive saleslady — and the equally perky "Nationwide is on your side" guy. But wait! Then there's also Dennis Haysbert for Allstate, the Rod Serling Geico guy, the Messenger dude from Progressive and Dale Earnhardt Jr. for Nationwide.

Overkill? Some of us may think so, but Joel Ohman, financial planner and founder of Carinsurancecomparison.com, informs us that there's actually a reason for such an oversaturation of insurance advertising. "One unique thing about insurance marketing is that there are so many different demographics that can be targeted," Ohman says. "Anyone age 16 and up that drives a car is usually in the market for at least car insurance. This is one reason why car insurance companies have so many different ad campaigns — so that they can reach many different demographics."

Many credit Geico for the demonstrable shift to multiple ad campaigns — including Ricardo de la Blanca, CEO of global marketing agency DLB Group.

"Warren Buffett is a person that really understands the power of marketing, and he was always pushing the company to do more with marketing," de la Blanca says of the billionaire who owns Geico insurance's parent company, Berkshire Hathaway.

The Gecko ad campaign was launched in 2000, four years after Buffett took over at Geico. Two years later, the company had 5 million policyholders. Geico enlisted cavemen and the Rod Serling guy to hawk their services soon after; today, the company boasts over 10 million clients.

Now it seems like competing insurance companies are rushing to catch up with their own multi-spokesman approaches.

"[Geico] moved from the No. 3 slot to the No. 2 slot," de la Blanca reports. "When a No. 3 in a competition moves so far and so fast, everybody starts trying to fight for this piece of the market."

heidi.patalano@metro.us

Right from the source

We asked Allstate spokeswoman Jaclyn Darrohn if the "Mayhem" and Dennis Haysbert "Truth About Insurance" campaigns were a reaction to Geico's multiple campaigns.

► "The launch of the 'Mayhem' and 'Truth About Insurance' campaigns were not developed as a reaction to what our competitors are doing, rather a strategic shift to reinforce the value message to consumers," she says. "The insurance category is increasingly competitive and Allstate strives to market to current and prospective customers in relevant ways."

Do you fancy Dancy?

He once got personalized pajamas from the Toronto Film Festival But despite this year's lack of free gifts, actor Hugh Dancy is back at the fest

Hugh Dancy has been keeping busy. After a scene-stealing supporting role in this summer's "Our Idiot Brother," Dancy brings two distinctly different films to TIFF. First, he stars alongside Elizabeth Olsen in the harrowing Sundance favorite "Martha Marcy Marlene." Later in the fest, he'll be debuting "Hysteria," about the development of the first vibrator. Metro caught up with British actor for this year's festival.

You have a couple of films here at the festival.

Yes. First of all, I'm leaving in between the two of them, so it feels like two festivals. I'll just come back with a whole new set of clothes. And ["Hysteria"] I haven't seen, so that's a strange experience. I thought, "Well I can try and watch it before, but at this point, when it's three days away, what's the point?" It's like having a dress rehearsal for your own execution, you know? You might as well just turn up and put on the blindfold.

So you're seeing it here?

Yes. In fact, it's odd. I will be doing press about it before I've actually seen it, which is always an odd experience. You're saying, "Yes, I love my co-workers, they're deeply sensitive individuals, and we're really scratching away at the nature of things." But I haven't got a clue.

We get a lot of quotes like that about actors working together. Well, it's unfortunately, boringly true that the majority of people you work with are nice or decent. ... It takes somebody to be a real prick to kind of throw things off-balance.

Will you have any time to see anything else while you're here?

I think the only thing I will get to see is "The Descendants." That's about it. I've been to TIFF twice ... but when I came the first time — which would've been four years ago — I arrived in my hotel room to find a pair of pristine, white pajamas with my name stitched into the pocket — "Hugh." It was very sweet. I still own them. It was from the festival. That's how this festival has changed! Where are my pajamas?

Maybe they're saving them for when you come back for 'Hysteria.'

Yes, that's right. "Hysteria" is definitely more of a pajamas kind of a movie.

'Shore' enough, the drama's still there

► 'Jersey Shore' housemates Vinny and Sammi dish on roommates, hooking up and looking fresh to death ► Their advice for global travel

You can take the crew out of Jersey, but you can't take the Jersey out of the crew. Season 4 of MTV's "Jersey Shore" is now in full swing, with the cast tearing up the streets of Florence, Italy. As usual, there's plenty of drama, and castmate Vinny Guadagnino promises that it's only just begun.

"It's been pretty bananas so far [and] it's gonna continue on like that," he tells Metro. "We saw the big Mike and Ronnie fight — there are gonna be more of those, more fighting coming up. But at the same time, you're gonna see us connect with Italy more. You're actually gonna see us explore a little bit more. It's gonna be cool."

His fellow castmate, Sammi "Sweetheart" Giancola — whose love life with bad boy Ronnie Ortiz-Magro has been a focal point of the entire series — is just glad to have less of a hand in this season's commotion.

"All the drama's gonna be primarily off me and with some other people you wouldn't really expect to see drama," she says. "Now everybody can see me in a different way."

When these two aren't causing trouble, they're keeping plenty busy on ► "Jersey Shore," starring Vinny Guadagnino and Sammi Giancola, airs Thursdays at 10 p.m. on MTV.

Words of wisdom

What was the best piece of travel advice you got before leaving for Italy?

- Vinny: My Uncle Nino told me if the girls have hair underneath their arms, then they're over 18. I was always giving the armpit check.
- Sammi: Make sure you get the right plug to bring with you, because in Italy the electricity is different. I had an issue with doing my hair, so just make sure you know what the outlets are gonna be like when you travel.

their side projects, and both strive to help their fans stay fresh to death: Vinny is the spokesman for Philips Norelco DIY Hair Clipper Pro, and Sammi has her own perfume, Dangerous, which she describes as "dangerously sweet — just like me."

"I pick my brands like I pick my women: I like quality," Vinny laughs, adding that he could get behind the clippers because he's a big proponent of a fresh haircut — he hits the barber every five days!

"I have really thick Sicilian hair and if it grows in, it just turns into a big fro. I kinda look like a young Michael Jackson," he admits. "People think if you have long hair you've gotta [maintain] it — no, if you have short hair, all you have is the fade, the design in your head, and once that grows in, you need a haircut already."

He's coy when discussing his manscaping routine, however. "You see the scruff on my face? Use your imagination," he says.

Sammi, who says her perfume is "light and airy," was hands-on with the production of the fragrance, noting that "it was something that I thought represented me, and that's why I put my name on it."

But does her focus on perfume mean that things have cooled with Ronnie? Not in the least bit.

"We're still together and everything's going really, really well," she says.

Academic analysis, overanalyzed

► Graduate students trade heady discourse on science and relationships in 'Completeness' ► It's fascinating conversation — until it lapses into navel-gazing

Documenting the romance of a molecular biologist and a computer scientist as if it were a lab report, "Completeness," at Playwrights Horizons, is too complete for its own good. That's a shame, since Itamar Moses' comedy has genuine appeal, populated with intelligent, involving characters winningly spouting scientific jargon. If only they knew when to stop.

Graduate students Molly (Aubrey Dollar) and Elliot (Karl Miller) love what they do. They also love to talk about it. And when they do so they're fascinating — at first. Their discourses are reasonably accessible but still challenging enough that you have to pay close attention or risk getting lost.

But before you get lost, you'll probably get bored. They ramble on with no discernible destination in sight. Their academic analysis inevitably lapses into haziness and ends up soporific, since it goes on for so long. And when Molly and Elliot aren't talking science they like to analyze — to death — their relationship, following the same pattern: interesting insights followed by labored navel-gazing to the point that you just don't care.

Dollar and Miller are an engaging couple, ably supported by Meredith Forlenza and Brian Avers in multiple roles. But they can't pull together a play with dialogue so unbridled. A breakdown of the fourth wall toward the end of the second act, in which Forlenza and Miller address the audience, offers little help. It comes out of nowhere and goes to the same place.

It's well known that Jacobs has had a lot on his plate lately, with his rumored negotiations with Christian Dior and all. Maybe that explains the simpler than usual approach to his spring collection, which featured preppy sportswear classics in navy and Kelly green with lots of neon mixed in. It was all kind of "club kid leaves the raves to go to college." The brights were the stars of the show. It wasn't his most earth-shatteringly creative collection for his secondary line, but will probably be a retail hit nonetheless. (Who doesn't want a piece of Marc?) ● KENYA HUNT

"No, it wasn't a real wedding. I'm single. I'm not married. It was a real ceremony, but the groom is actually a fellow actor, and also a very good friend of mine. It is just a theatrical performance that runs like a real wedding."

"I think fashion shows are great and like theater: There is a performance by the models, a performance by the designers and a performance by people like myself who are invited to shows. But eventually, we will be moving over the theatricality. It is about the clothes, the line and the idea, and how these turn into stuff people wear most. So you can't discount fashion. No one is walking around naked."

With Taylor Swift, Beyonce and Solange Knowles, Dakota and Elle Fanning, Kim Gordon and David Byrne all sitting front row (yes, all of them) it could have been easy for the guests to steal the spotlight from the clothes. But there was no looking away from Kate and Laura Mulleavy's innovative, yet wearable clothes. The dresses were textured, crinkled, gathered and draped, each one more ornately constructed than the next. But more than anything, the Mulleavy sisters deserve a hug for giving us a break from the sea of Easter egg colors we've seen this week. A girl can only take but so much pink and yellow. Instead, they worked in a rich color palette that included marigold, aqua, almond, silver and gold. ● KENYA HUNT

Astroturf, fancy wrought iron benches, champagne and cupcakes created a garden party setting for Stacey Bendet's spring collection. This season the designer looked to the "colors of Palm Beach in the 1960s" and the sophistication of the 1940s. (For more on her inspirations and an inside look at the presentation, watch our video at www.metro.us.) Whatever her starting point, Bendet's line, as usual, embodies her carefree, fun spirit. She even did a version of the funky, vertical-striped pants that put her on the map. There were flirty dresses in lively corals, sky blues and floral prints; silhouettes ranged from A-line minis to strapless and fitted to flouncy. Most looks came cinched at the waist, above the knee and embellished with sequins. These are numbers for girls with an active social calendar to frolic in — perfect for all the PYTs like Kourtney Kardashian, Eva Amurri and Lydia Hearst in attendance. ● TINA CHADIRA

3 Herve Leger

It must be hard to keep putting a new spin on the bandage dress, but to their credit, designers Max and Lubov Azria find ways. This season they worked with weaving and braiding in metallics and tribal prints. The show opened with warriorlike gold foil dresses featuring intricate cutouts and braided strap detailing that felt more "Mad Max," less red carpet. This was the problem with some of the looks with fringe and weaving — they seemed too fantastical for real life. But there were black and white options, however, that read fresh and sexy for those women searching for a good party dress. ● METRO/TC

the very urban, cool and expensive-looking clothes on show yesterday. All of the brand's staples were there — the cardigans, the tailored trousers, the blazers — but updated with the season's new palette, color blocking, print mixing and sequins. (One multicolored, striped sequin skirt had Michelle Obama's name written all over it.) And if you needed any more proof of the new power of J.Crew: Beyonce stopped by for a rare Fashion Week appearance. ● METRO/KH

5 Rachel Zoe

It's as though Rachel Zoe looked to her closet — specifically the amazing racks of '70s vintage we're sure the stylist-turned-designer has collected — as the inspiration for her spring line. (She cites Brigitte Bardot.) There were mostly loose-fit maxi dresses, some featuring floral prints, one-shoulder or high slits up the thigh; gauzy floor-length skirts; chic blazers and glam sequin party dresses. The designer herself was in look No. 7, the flowy high-waisted palazzo pants, as she walked ladies such as Anna Dello Russo and Molly Sims through the show. We can see this wearable collection — especially the "bananas" sky-high heels — becoming as popular as Zoe's unavoidable catch phrases. ● METRO/TC

6 Tory Burch

Now that's how you put on your first runway show! Tory Burch dazzled editors and buyers with her pretty, feminine and wearable spring collection. First separates came in cheery corals, yellows and seafoam greens and several mixed and matched prints for interesting, quirky layered looks — like a striped sweater with polka dots peeking out from the sleeves, worn over a floral print skirt. Other stunners: anything with sequins, the navy and cream series and the closing chiffon gowns. We can't wait for the next one. ● METRO/TC

Bulk up on muscle health

CETTS IMAGES

► He might be strong, but is he in the best physical health?

► Ginormous guns shouldn't be the goal ► What happens when you overdo it ► Rethink your proteins

There's more to muscle health than building and strengthening. Of course, strong muscles aid movement and provide proper support to hold the skeleton erect and aligned. But bulking up muscles too much can cause the opposite effect. It's important to keep your muscles at their fittest — without overstretching things.

"Muscles are what moves us. Every movement is about our muscles," says Jenn Coia, LMT, who works at Manhattan's Spa Merge. "I used to work at a gym when I was in massage school. I'd see these guys with big, hulking muscles and they could barely move. They're decreasing their range of motion of every joint. If you can't move, then you're having to compensate for what should be a natural range of motion."

High-protein diets are synonymous with muscle-building, but "high-protein diets put a strain on the filtering organs," says Coia. "A balanced diet is always the healthiest choice."

The result can be injury, ranging from tightness and soreness in other areas to joint wear and postural problems, including restriction of blood flow or even nerve damage. "That's why yoga and Pilates took off.

They allow you to build toned muscles, but they allow you to be functional," says Coia.

As a massage therapist, Coia works to heal and prevent further injury on sore and damaged muscles. "If there's an injury, it can help with the healing of scar tissue by aligning muscle fibers."

The muscle needs time to repair with simple rest, too. "If you overstretch a muscle, you create micro-tears. That muscle will heal itself because it's just a micro-injury. But you've pushed too hard and need to recover."

How to fight flawlessness

► What's the difference between doing your best and taking things too far? ► Combat the perfectionist in you

Perfectionism isn't about getting it right or being perfect; rather, it's a perpetual quest to find what's wrong with something. For example, one may look at what others consider a beautiful piece of art and find flaws in it. Ultimately, a perfectionist needs to embrace the concept that there's no such thing as perfect. Things can be just good or just OK.

Early on, a perfectionist may have been given mixed messages from parents: "Good job ... but you can do better." Or "Getting a B is good but an A is better." This simultaneous criticism and praise sends a mixed message to the child and

The question:

I've been called a perfectionist by a lot of people, and they are probably right. I tend to obsess over things and push for perfect all the time. Case in point: It took me way too long just to write this question. What is perfectionism, and how can I do less of it?

there's a drive to satisfy the parent and do better, even when things by most standards are fine. Over time, a person becomes mired in this thinking. Depression and anxiety develop, and relationships can take a hit.

Here's how to be less perfect:

Change your narrative. Rather than looking at something's negative aspects and perceived deficits and shortcomings, look at the positive traits and what you know to be fact. Lower your standards and come up with new and acceptable ones.

Reevaluate your goals. Make them reasonable and be flexible.

Kill the dichotomous thinking. Accept the notion that there are more options than just perfect and imperfect. By seeing the countless shades of gray between black and white, you'll expand your thinking; this can benefit you.

Ask yourself: When is enough, enough? Embrace and normalize being OK.

Go ahead and get really messy and dirty. Make mistakes, loosen up your thinking and prove to yourself that you're still fine.

Food-borne illness numbers

Study subjects: Various people diagnosed with food poisoning
Location of study: U.S.

Results: WebMD reports that in 2008, food-borne disease "caused 23,152 cases of illness, nearly 1,300 hospitalizations and 22 deaths. But because most food-borne illnesses go unreported, the actual numbers are much higher. The CDC estimates that contaminated food causes as many as 48 million illnesses annually."

Significance: 2008 is the most recent year that such information is available. The report con-

Study subjects: Cancer patients
Location of study: U.K.

Results: The BBC reports that the "number of new cancer cases has increased by 20 percent in under a decade and now stands at 12 million a year, according to the World Cancer Research Fund." It also states that "nearly a quarter of those cases are 'preventable.'"

Significance: Almost three million new diagnoses per year "are linked to diet, exercise and obesity."

Tackling Tourette's

PBS Channel 13 is shedding light on Tourette's syndrome with a new documentary, "Different is the New Normal," premiering tomorrow at 8 p.m. The film follows the story of Ariel Small, a 17-year-old boy with the condition, and features former "American Idol" contestant James Durbin, who is also afflicted by the disease.

Study. Alcohol

► This might explain all that drunk-dialing.

This is your brain on booze. Any questions?

Why do we act like fools when we drink too much? New research out of the University of Missouri found that alcohol weakens the power of our brain's "signal" that tells us we're making a mistake, and also lessens our concern about said errors. "Our study isn't the first to show that alcohol reduces this alarm signal; but contrary to previous studies, our study shows that alcohol doesn't reduce your awareness of mistakes — it reduces how much you care about making those mistakes," says Bruce Bartholow, associate professor of psychology at MU. ● METRO/ME

Not so fly: Sex pills fail quality tests

Only 30 percent of the male sexual enhancement supplements Consumerlab.com reviewed passed their quality tests. Four products had less of a sig-

Corporations care about us

RE: "TEA PARTY: FOR THE RICH ONLY": May I suggest you take an American history class and learn facts before making ridiculous accusations about the Tea Party. These "greedy profiteering corporations" are what employ Americans. From McDonald's to Wal-Mart, they give people jobs — which is what we all need right now. Punishing companies will just stop any progress in this country. Maybe you would like to consider moving to Cuba.

JUSTIN CLEARY, VIA E-MAIL

Time to mine rich's wealth

RE: "OBAMA: LET'S AVOID POLITICAL GAMES": Finally a jobs plan implemented by Obama that seems promising. Eliminating $467 billion in tax breaks for the wealthy and using that money to fund a job proposal isn't such a bad idea. Its about time the wealthier Americans dig into their pockets and help.

Liberators are also terrorists

RE: "NO PACIFIST EVER LIBERATED A DEATH CAMP": Two things: (1) No practicing pacifist ever created a death camp. (2) The people who liberated the death camps in 1945 are the same people who, less than a century earlier, slaughtered Native Americans so white colonizers could mine for gold.

CRAIG SHOEMAKE, VIA E-MAIL

Why blame the victim?

RE: "VIOLENCE IS THE ANSWER": Open mouth, insert foot. You really laid an egg by saying women's scanty clothes provoke rape! They may provoke active harassment by men — I've always called wearing scanty clothes passive harassment by women. But rape is altogether different: It's about not sex, but power and violence.

J. ANDREW SMITH, BLOOMFIELD, NJ

So we should blame the murder victim because they were in the wrong place at the wrong time? We should blame the person whose house was robbed because it was so inviting, instead of the thief? You apparently don't think much of personal responsibility.

SARA MINOR, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. You won't find a better day to sort out a problem that's been on your mind. You should easily be able to take it apart and find the intrinsic clues that will lead you to the perfect solution.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Don't take any wild risks, but do follow any instincts and/or hunches pertaining to your financial dealings. Your perceptions are better than usual.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Immediately disassociate yourself from any negative-thinkers. Instead, associate yourself with those you believe to be lucky. Some of their good instincts will rub off on you.

Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Sublime conditions will quickly replace any leftover negativity that you wake up with. Be on your toes, because anticipation will help you spot opportunities and gain much power.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. After a bumpy start, Lady Luck will look extremely kindly on you. This will be especially true in areas where you are able to express your personal creativity.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Be particularly watchful for developments that would enhance your financial well-being and position. This could be a better than usual time for you. Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Good news is on its way pertaining to one of your personal interests. Be sure to take advantage of it in a manner that would enhance all possibilities.

Aries March 21-April 19. It behooves you to focus your efforts and energies on work-related issues that can yield you a large profit and/or enhance your material interests in some manner.

Taurus April 20-May 20. Certain friends and contacts could be luckier for you than usual. Hang out with those who provide you with fun and have an interest in your affairs.

Gemini May 21-June 20. If you need some type of help or assistance, turn to those who you know have the expertise you require. If there is one person in particular whom you've previously aided, go to him or her first.

Cancer June 21-July 22. You should put aside whatever is bothering you and turn toward optimism and accomplishment. You stand a good chance of succeeding.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22. No one is better than you at sorting out critical issues in ways that are advantageous to yourself and others. Use your gifts to handle something very important. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

► Antonio Cromartie was beaten routinely by Dez Bryant much of the first half, including this three-yard touchdown.

Where's the D?

► Lost in the excitement of Jets' win was absence of defense ► Rex says not to worry, Romo made throws ► Cromartie sees room for improvement

There's still work to be done.

Lost in the euphoria of Sunday night's improbable comeback win over Dallas was the fact that the much-hyped Jets defense had a rocky night. The Jets were victimized by big plays, complete breakdowns and systematic drives.

Even though they walked off the field all smiles following Nick Folk's 50-yard winning field goal, the Jets conceded 390 yards of total offense to the Cowboys and quarterback Tony Romo.

That qualifies as sloppy and ineffective play for a unit that two weeks earlier had been touted by head coach Rex Ryan as among the best in the league.

"We made a few mental mistakes that really cost us," Ryan said. "Quite honestly, Romo made a couple of throws on us — the perfectly thrown ball is almost impossible to defend, and he made a couple of those throws [Sunday] night."

While that is true, the secondary had no answers for Dez Bryant. Ryan said that Bryant "seemed like he was open the whole night."

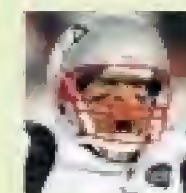

In total, six Cowboys receivers registered multiple catches.

While it is easy to pick on the entire secondary, cornerback Antonio Cromartie emerged as the

Do the Jets have the right pieces?

Corrections might not make up for all of the flaws though.

The secondary looked painfully slow at times and relied too much on big hits instead of being ball hawks. And the linebackers struggled to contain a viable receiving option at tight end.

And with Tom Brady throwing for 517 yards in the Patriots' Monday night blowout win at Miami, the Jets' defense better learn the error of their ways fast.

Not every opponent will gift wrap a victory for the Jets as Dallas did in their Sunday night collapse.

Mangini regrets 'Spygate' incident

Former Jets head coach Eric Mangini hinted yesterday in an interview with WEEI in Boston that he played a role in the infamous Patriots "SpyGate" controversy.

In September 2007, the Patriots were caught red-handed filming the Jets' sideline signals during a game. The fallout resulted in a massive fine for Patriots head coach Bill Belichick and the Pats.

At the time, however, Mangini denied any involvement in exposing New England. Yesterday he sang a slightly different tune.

"It's one of those things where the end result wasn't the goal," Mangini said. "My intention was never to hurt [Belichick] or the [Patriots] organization."

ONE (BLEEP) OF A MONDAY NIGHT GAME

Opinion

McINTYRE

SPORTS@METRO.US

Everybody's going nuts over Tom Brady's 517 yards passing on Monday Night Football, but clearly the highlight was announcer Ron Jaworski accidentally cursing while talking about a Chad Henne pass.

The mild-mannered Jaws slipped in a bad word that rhymes with hit while talking about how easy a play should have been. He said it so matter-of-factly that he might as well have been teaching receivers a stop-and-go pattern. With two minutes left in the game, it was time to apologize: "a little earlier in the show, when Chad Henne was making a throw, I said an inappropriate word so I want to apologize. I hope I didn't offend anyone with that word." Then came about six seconds of awkward silence.

Nothing like

What if it was at Wimbledon?

cursing on live TV to spice up an already-interesting game.

Hater in the house

I don't know if people still make prank (or is it crank?) phone calls, but someone with deft audio skills should cut up the Serena Williams rant at the U.S. Open from this past weekend and really have fun with it. I'd imagine the call going something like this (Serena's actual quotes are listed below):

Victim: "Hello?"

Prank caller: "You're a hater and unattractive inside."

Victim: "What?"

Prank caller: "Don't look at me. Don't look my way."

Victim: "I think you have the wrong number."

Prank caller: "If you ever see me walking down the hall, look the other way because you're out of control."

Victim: "You got the wrong number."

Prank caller: "I expressed myself, we're in America last time I checked."

Pour one out for Tupac

I don't know where you stand on the East Coast-West Coast rap wars of the 1990s, but Sept. 13, 1996, will always live in infamy. Rapper Tupac Shakur died that day. I thought I'd take you back to that fall to see what the sports landscape looked like:

MLB: Yankees beat the Orioles in the ALCS when a kid named Jeffrey Maier reached over the fence and took a homer away from Baltimore outfielder Tony Tarasco and then rallied to beat the Braves in the World Series.

NBA: Michael Jordan won the All-Star game MVP, NBA MVP and NBA Finals MVP. The Bulls beat Shawn Kemp and the Sonics in the Finals.

NFL: Brett Favre, back when people liked him, helped the Packers defeat the Patriots in the Super Bowl.

* Studio size apartments in Carnegie Terrace I & II are limited to single person households.

 Monthly Rent is subject to change. Electric use (including air conditioning) is not included in Monthly Rent.

 Total Gross Annual Income is subject to change.

Applications for apartments will be logged as received each month and considered based on affordable apartment vacancies in two 80/20 multifamily buildings both of which are financed by New York State Housing Finance Agency. Note: As many viable apartment applicants remain on existing Carnegie Terrace and Carnegie Terrace II waiting lists for household sizes greater than one person, new applicants who are not eligible for a studio size affordable apartment should consider other affordable housing options. If your household size is more than one person (applicant alone) and you apply via this waiting list solicitation, you will remain on this Carnegie Terrace I & II Waiting List for many years into the future and may never be considered for an affordable apartment in these buildings.

- Applicants will be required to meet household, income and additional criteria.
- Applicants who submit more than one application will be disqualified.
- Applications must be fully completed and signed to be considered.

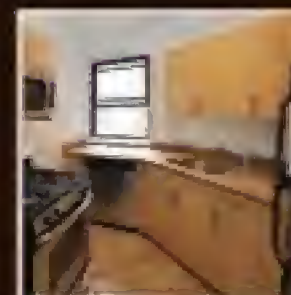

Applicants for vacancy affordable studio size apartments may request a copy of the Carnegie Terrace I & II Application or return their completed application by US Mail as follows:

CARNEGIE TERRACE I & II WAITING LIST

c/o Kenbar Management, 1500 Lexington Avenue, New York, NY, 10029

Submission of false or knowingly incomplete information in an application for affordable housing will result in disqualification from further consideration for an apartment as well as possible referral to appropriate Federal and/or New York State authorities for criminal prosecution.

Submission of an application for Carnegie Terrace I & II does not guarantee you an apartment, and in no way binds the building ownership/management to reserve or assign an apartment to you.

At the height of the boom, we often wrote of the developers of massive condominium towers one-upping each other with newer, bigger buildings and the next, best over-the-top amenity.

At Midtown's 220-unit Platinum, there was the golf simulator and the massage room. At the 258-unit Riverhouse in Battery Park City, there was the pet spa. And at the Financial District's 319-unit William Beaver House, basketball and squash courts, a hot tub and an outdoor shower were all part of the original attempts to woo buyers.

But things have changed. Now, with much of the inventory from the boom era's mega-condos sold off, boutique buildings with fewer amenities are dominating the new development sales market.

"For the last two years, you didn't see bigger deals," says Andy Geringer, the managing director of new business development at the Marketing Directors. "The [projects]

Quoted

"The boutique quality of buildings is becoming important to people because they're fearful that perhaps if they buy in a 300-unit building and only 100 units are sold, then there are 200 units unsold."

KENNETH HORN, PRESIDENT OF CONDO DEVELOPMENT FIRM ALCHEMY PROPERTIES, WHICH GENERALLY FOCUSES ON 30- TO 70-UNIT PROJECTS.

coming out today were deals that were worked on a year or two years ago, and that's when the financing was really difficult."

It's no secret that a difficult financing climate is the major culprit. Even as lenders warm to multifamily construction, rental developers have reaped most of the benefits. New condos, particularly of the several-hundreds-of-units breed, have been scarce.

So, in place of the Manhattan Houses (581 units) and the Sheffields (580 units) have been rentals and boutique condos with a few dozen units or less — like 77 Reade St. and 471 Washington St., both of which launched earlier this year with 29 and 12 units, respectively.

Large condo projects are also inherently more risky, not just for the lender and the developer, but for the buyer.

In order to qualify for Fannie Mae financing, for example, buildings must reach either 51 percent or 70 percent presold. That's a lot easier to accomplish with 20 units than it is with 200, and today's buyers are keenly aware of the potential repercussions of purchasing a unit in a large building that winds up stagnating, having just witnessed so many boom-time developments go belly-up.

Drop-off in size of NYC condo projects

According to data compiled by real estate aggregator StreetEasy, the average new condo to hit the market in Manhattan during 2007 contained 81 units. At that time, buildings like Midtown South's Twenty9th Park Madison (142 units) and the Upper East Side's Century Tower (128 units) were hardly headline-grabbers.

In 2010, though, the average condo was down to 48 units. The Setai Fifth Avenue, with 190 units, was by far the largest to launch. And, so far in 2011, the average condo to come online has 34 units, with the 111-unit 250 West St. the biggest of the pack.

It's also the trend in Bklyn

David Maundrell, founder of Brooklyn-based brokerage Aptsandlofts.com, says his company's recent new development marketing contracts reflect the boutiques-only trend.

While Aptsandlofts.com will be representing a slew of new rentals set to come on-line in 2012 and beyond, he says the vast majority of the company's new condo pipeline — which Maundrell described as “all these little boutique things all over the place” — will hit the market by the beginning of next year.

► Time to ring up your broker: In 74 percent of the country it's cheaper to buy than rent, according to Trulia.com.

Stop throwing your money away on rent

► This adage couldn't be more true than it is right now ► According to new data, most of the country offers better deals for buying than renting

This might just be the time to purchase a new home.

Recent data from real estate website Trulia.com found that buying is cheaper than renting in 74 percent of the nation's major cities.

In locations such as Las Vegas, Philadelphia and Detroit — where foreclosures have been rampant, unemployment is high and prices have dropped considerably — purchasing a home can mean lower monthly mortgage payments than rents, according to the real estate site.

"With interest rates

where they are and property values really on the very, very low side, it's a good opportunity to buy," says Joanne Davidow, a vice president at Prudential Fox & Roach in Philadelphia. "A lot of sellers have gotten very real as far as prices are concerned."

The survey compared rents for two-bedroom units to the selling price of two-bedroom properties. In many communities, rents are high and vacancy rates are low because people are squeamish about making a large purchase during a down economy.

New York

Average rent for a two-bedroom unit:

$3,150 to $3,650

Median price of a two-bedroom unit:

$1.25 to $1.35 million

Many homeowners are opting to bank their money and rent instead of purchasing a new place.

"Prospective homebuyers no longer see homes as a quick moneymaking investment," says Pete Flint, CEO and co-founder of Trulia. "They are proceeding with more caution, asking themselves if they are planning to live in the home for several years, have enough money saved up to make a down payment and can pay a monthly mortgage."

NEWLY CONSTRUCTED APARTMENTS FOR RENT

Pratt Area Community Council is pleased to announce that applications are now being accepted for 38 affordable rental apartments now under construction at 40 Vanderbilt Avenue in the Wallabout section of Brooklyn.

This supportive housing building is being constructed through the City of New York's Department of Housing Preservation and Development, Division of Special Needs Housing. The size, rent and targeted income distribution for the 38 apartments are as follows:

Apartments Available	Apartment Size	Household Size	Monthly Rent	Total Annual Income Range Minimum-Maximum
38	Studio	1	$492-$664	$21,774-$28,650

Full-time students are not eligible * No pets * Income and rent guidelines subject to change

Qualified applicants will be required to meet income and family size guidelines and additional selection criteria. Applications may be requested in 3 ways:

- 1) By mail, by writing to: Navy Green c/o PACC, 201 Dekalb Avenue, Brooklyn, NY 11205. Please include a self-addressed envelope with your request.
- 2) By internet: you can download an application from our website: www.40vanderbilt.org
- 3) In person: You may stop by our offices at: 896-900 Fulton Street or 201 Dekalb Avenue in Brooklyn.

Completed applications must be returned by regular mail only (no priority, certified, registered, express or overnight mail will be accepted) to a post office box number, or its equivalent, that will be listed with the application, and must be postmarked by November 2, 2011. Applications postmarked after November 2, 2011 will be set aside for possible future consideration. Applications will be selected by lottery; applicants who submit more than one application will be disqualified. Preference will be given to New York City residents. Current and eligible residents of Brooklyn Community Board 2 will receive preference for 50% of the units.

No Brokers Fee. No Application Fee.

NYC remains pricey

Owning a home may be cheaper in most U.S. cities, but Boston and New York are among the exceptions. They're part of the approximately 12 percent of the nation's cities where renting is still easier on the budget than buying.

Newlyweds Erin and Brian Fleming were hoping to move out of their Boston rental and purchase their first home, but realized quickly they couldn't afford it.

"I think to own the place we rent would cost at least $600,000, which we could never afford. We pay around $1,600 in rent [monthly]," says Mr. Fleming.

Harlem brownstone's television moment

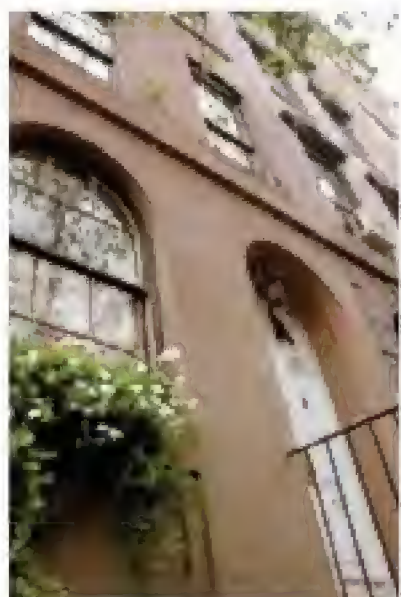

HGTV's "Design Stars," the TV series that features 12 interior designers battling it out, showcased some trendy Manhattan brownstones in its season finale on Monday, Harlem + Bespoke reports.

Viewers saw finalists Meg Caswell and Karl Sponholtz each redesign a room in a Harlem brownstone for real-life homeowners. They then turned each of their projects into presentations for a TV pilot.

Reality shows seem to be eager to shoot in Harlem these days, the website noted, judging by this HGTV cameo and its recent spot on "Project Runway."

The neighborhood has been experiencing a real estate renaissance. As property values in other Manhattan districts soared pre-recession, Harlem became the new development frontier. Luxury condominium buildings, more retailers and a surge of new residents have appeared in Harlem of late.
